Quick Facts About Tiger Sharks in Fuvahmulah Island

- 1. Year-Round Presence: Unlike many places, tiger sharks can be seen around Fuvahmulah throughout the year, making it a reliable destination for shark enthusiasts.
- 2. Unique Location: The island's deep, nutrient-rich waters attract a variety of marine life, providing an ideal hunting ground for these sharks.
- 3. Diverse Shark Sizes: Divers encounter both juvenile and adult tiger sharks, with some reaching up to 5 meters (16 feet) long.
- 4. Close Encounters: Known for their curiosity, tiger sharks often approach divers, allowing for exciting yet safe experiences, managed by trained guides.
- 5. Conservation Efforts: Local dive centers promote shark conservation, raising awareness about their importance to the ecosystem and advocating for sustainable tourism.
- 6. Home to Other Species: Besides tiger sharks, Fuvahmulah waters host other species like thresher sharks, whale sharks, and hammerheads, enhancing its appeal to divers.

These features make Fuvahmulah a top destination for memorable and responsible shark diving.

Do's and Don't's for Diving with Tiger Sharks in Fuvahmulah

Diving with tiger sharks at Fuvahmulah Island is a dream adventure for enthusiasts around the world. Before diving into this thrilling experience, it's important to understand the key do's and don'ts to ensure a safe and enjoyable encounter.

- 1. Do Not Feed: Under no circumstances should you attempt to feed Tiger Sharks or any other marine animals during your dive. Feeding disrupts their natural behavior and may lead to aggressive encounters.
- 2. Avoid Sudden Movements: Refrain from making sudden movements or loud noises that could startle or agitate the sharks. Maintain a calm and composed demeanor throughout your dive.
- 3. Do Not Approach Aggressively: Avoid approaching Tiger Sharks too closely or in an aggressive manner. Respect their space and allow them to move freely in their environment.
- 4. Do Not Touch: Resist the temptation to touch Tiger Sharks or any other marine life you encounter during your dive. Touching can cause stress to the animals and may provoke defensive behavior.
- 5. Refrain from Flash Photography: Flash photography can startle and disorient Tiger Sharks, so it's best to avoid using flash photography during your dive. Opt for natural light or underwater photography techniques that minimize disturbance.

- 1. Follow Expert Guidance: Always dive under the supervision of experienced guides who are familiar with the behavior of Tiger Sharks and know how to ensure a safe encounter.
- 2. Maintain Respectful Distance: Admire these majestic creatures from a respectful distance to avoid startling them or disrupting their natural habitat.
- 3. Remain Calm: Maintain a calm demeanor and steady movements underwater to minimize disturbances and promote a harmonious interaction.
- 4. Observe Wildlife Etiquette: Respect the marine environment and refrain from touching or chasing Tiger Sharks or any other marine life.
- 5. Stay Alert: Remain vigilant and attentive to your surroundings at all times to ensure your safety and the safety of others in your group.
